Dear Sir:

Thank you for asking us to assist in your job search. We have reviewed current job listings but have found nothing in line with your interests and experience. For this reason we suggest that you do not rely on the Technical Service Council but apply to prospective employers directly.

Even during difficult times, many jobs become vacant because of transfers, resignations and retirements. Many jobs are not advertised or were advertised weeks ago and are still open. Therefore speculative applications to employers are useful. We suggest you use the Canadian Trade Index, Scott's Directory and the yellow pages as source of names of prospective employers.

We shall retain your application and will contact you, should a suitable position come to our attention.

We apologize for the rather negative tone of this letter but we are sure that you would prefer to be made aware of the situation rather than be falsely encouraged.

Yours truly,

Marlene Boudet
